Letter from the Chairman

Hello BPA Family! The 2018-2019 school year was one of great transformation for our organization. We embraced our national theme of “Together, We Create” and chartered a path to take our organization to the next level. Under the leadership of our national officers, our students accomplished a great deal through the development of leadership, citizenship, and academic skills.

We welcomed our new Executive Director, Dr. LouAnn Ross, and under her first year of leadership, we began to work on a bold vision for BPA and made some significant strides. Notable achievements include – a refreshed brand with a new and improved visual identity, a new and improved website and technology platform, increased individual giving and corporate partnerships, and increased advocacy efforts, including Dr. Ross’ leadership of the National Coordinating Council of Career and Technical Student Organizations (NCC-CTSO). The board’s new Advocacy Committee was led by our National Secondary President Dominica Chavez and she did an outstanding job developing resources for local chapters to leverage, as well as represented our organization in Washington D.C. and beyond.

We started the year by conducting mission and visioning sessions with each our stakeholder groups. This work culminated in a bold and visionary strategic plan that will serve as our guide into the future. Our strategic plan is inspired by our new mission statement, which is to - develop and empower student leaders to discover their passion and change the world by creating unmatched opportunities in learning, professional growth, and service.

To enhance the board’s ability to fulfill our governance responsibilities, I challenged my fellow board members this year to complete the BoardSource Certificate of Non-Profit Board Education. This six-part education program is designed to educate participants in the major aspects of an effective non-profit board. I’m happy to report that all board members were certified this year and I can certainly tell you this learning experience has helped elevate our engagement as board members.

Enclosed in this report you will find our year-end financial statement and audit report. Also enclosed is our 2019-2022 Strategic Plan. As we move into the 2019-2020 school year, I invite you to join us as we continue on this journey to make our collective vision a reality for the students that we serve.

Best Regards,

Cedric K. Bandoh

Over the past year, BPA has gone through some significant changes. However, the driving force for BPA remains the same. It is now, as it has always been, about opportunity. Whether one joins BPA as a student member, an alumnus, or an advisor, the opportunities provided through competitions, networking, industry involvement, and service are limitless. These opportunities are what gives purpose to potential. These opportunities are what build up strong professionals and innovative business leaders that are products of BPA. The success derived from taking advantage of one’s BPA membership is evident throughout all levels of our organization; however, the influence that BPA’s opportunities has on individuals is uniquely reflected in the lives of our National Secondary and Post-secondary Presidents:

My BPA journey began the moment I paid my membership dues; however, I didn’t truly begin to capitalize on my membership until I appreciated the focus points behind our organization. Membership programs like the WSAP competitive events, Torch Awards, BPA Cares, and even pin trading each connect learning to application, service to recognition, and members to other members. I ran to be an officer on the National Executive Council to share the membership’s voice on the direction we want those opportunities to be developed in alignment with the business industry. Continuing to link our membership to meet the needs of the business industry and prepare emerging professionals is the direction that BPA is taking to innovate as a CTSO.”

– Emily White, Secondary Division President

When I first joined BPA, I never would have imagined that it would transform my life and build me up to be the leader that I am today. After five years as an active member of multiple divisions within the organization, I have seen firsthand the opportunities that the organization has to offer all of its members. By taking advantage of service, networking, certifications, competitions, and leadership roles within the organization, I have been able to excel in both my educational institutions and the workforce. BPA is constantly challenging me to become the best version of myself, and this year, I decided that I wanted to do the same for others. As a national officer, I hope to not only serve as the voice of our members, but also create life-changing opportunities that will push members outside of their comfort zone and transform them as leaders, just as the organization has done for me.”

– Cassandra Lindo, Post-secondary Division President

Every individual has the potential to reach their unique purpose; however, this can sometimes seem impossible when doors to opportunities are closed. Our job as an organization is to continue to open new avenues to opportunities and to ensure that our members excel from their potential and fulfill their purpose. Our members are the future of our ever-changing workforce, and it is our mission to continue to build them up them as leaders and equip them with the tools to succeed as innovative individuals. By continuing to develop and empower our members to reach their purpose through the creation of unmatched opportunities, we will truly achieve our vision as an organization.
Since its founding, Business Professionals of America has been unwavering on preparing students for their futures. In an effort to maintain a consistency of viability and relevance, our organization must continually evaluate the marketplace to ensure we remain modern and applicable. This past year, we dedicated much time on this very focus.

As our organization looks at continuing to grow and evolve, it is important that our messaging, visual presence and brand reflect the current marketplace and BPA maintains a direct connection with stakeholder groups.

By launching a newly designed website and unveiling a new logo and updated brand identity this past year, BPA has realigned its organizational values and reaffirmed its dedication to innovation as well as a vibrant, advancing membership.

The completely revamped website features improved functionality, a more modern and engaging design and enhanced content areas, all in an effort to help stakeholders access what they are looking for within a few clicks. The website now provides tools, information and resources that inspire a positive experience and discovery of purpose. With enriched changes to navigation, new pop-out menus and a host of other modifications, visitors can access the website and browse with ease on any device whether computer, tablet or mobile phone. BPA’s redesigned website represents a significant step forward for the organization.

After more than 31 years, the organization also unveiled a new logo and updated brand identity aligning its strategic framework and vision. With the roll-out of both of these pivotal initiatives, BPA has re-introduced itself as an organization laser-focused on the professional development and future of our youth, providing the tools, skills and experiences needed to compete, succeed and thrive in the business world.

From a new website, logo, tagline, design approach, and brand colors, BPA’s goals include creating clear and strong messaging with consistent visuals that are adaptable across various media; conveying an innovative organization that is evolving and future-focused; building a sense of community that enhances the membership’s connection to the organization with a renewed vision and amplified purpose; and elevating the organization’s reputation for preparing students for the future.
We are improving our measurement of leadership development in an effort to tailor opportunities to meet the needs of our stakeholders more effectively, with a goal of revolutionizing servant leadership and lifelong leadership development in an impactful and innovative way.

At the core of servant leadership is the idea of doing what is best for the group, shared responsibility and accountability, and serving others. While the concept of servant leadership sounds simple, many good organizations struggle to espouse these values. Experts believe the key characteristics of a servant leader includes listening, empathy, healing, awareness, persuasion, conceptualization, stewardship, foresight, commitment to the growth of people, focus on building a community, and love. Students, community, and the global workforce will benefit from the development work we will do as we build business and industry leaders with unmatched leadership skills. At BPA, we want leaders who are not just ready to take on a leadership roles but leaders who are equipped to stand in the gap for others when necessary and prepared for increased responsibility.

We will begin this work by identifying more innovative methods of providing actionable skills that our members, advisors, advisory councils, and board members can use for deepened growth. Under the guidance of our Director of Leadership Development, Executive Director and Board of Trustees, BPA will unpack real-world examples of leadership in action and push the thinking of all stakeholders on ways to handle leadership challenges. We will spend time focusing on intrinsic and extrinsic motivators and the leadership strengths within BPA. We will also identify areas where student members, advisors, BPA advisory councils, and board members can benefit from training, resources and other development activities to increase organizational capacity through leadership development opportunities.

Under this newly refined direction in leadership development, BPA will seek to reshape perceptions of leadership and establish that leadership is not innate, but something that can be developed at all levels.

Setting our sights on the year ahead, we will spend time developing and honing leadership skills as an organization with an intense focus on servant leadership. It is evident that the need for leadership has continued to evolve, and as we embark on the future for BPA, we will spend time developing as an organization.

“I joined BPA because I wanted to grow as a leader and learn skills that I could take with me into the workforce.”

– John Lucas Guimaraes, Massachusetts

“BPA has given me opportunities of a lifetime to network and grow as a student.” – Jon Perrault, Michigan
Volunteers are the heartbeat for so many nonprofit organizations across the country, including Business Professionals of America. For more than 50-years, BPA has empowered student leaders to discover their passion and change the world through service learning and servant leadership.

Each year, in classrooms around the nation, BPA student members work with educators and industry experts to develop as global leaders through education, competition and service to others. Countless members of the BPA family have shared how this organization has made a lasting impact on their lives.

Our organization would not accomplish a fraction of the good work that is done without the dedication of volunteers and the support of our donors. This is especially true when it comes to the success of our keystone program, BPA’s National Leadership Conference.

For many years, students who attend the National Leadership Conference have an opportunity to sign up as a conference volunteer and intern. These experiences have been available in several areas and have offered upwards of more than 500 students and advisors a chance to participate annually.

BPA is so proud of the commitment not only our students and advisors have made to this incredible organization, but also the commitment our supporters continue to make and the trust that has been placed in us to develop meaningful programs that change student’s lives like our NLC Volunteer & Intern Program.

Continued support not only enables BPA the ability to regularly deliver valuable programs, professional development and scholarships for our members, but it also offers the opportunity to deliver new programs and experiences to the various stakeholders of our great organization.

This past year introduced new ideas, experiences and directions for BPA to further advance the mission and vision of our organization. As we set our sights on what lies ahead, we are inspired by the ability to enhance membership engagement by delivering and creating new programs such as a Post-secondary Leadership Summit, a new Learning Management System, as well as a stronger emphasis on leadership development while expanding other programs like the BPA Cares and Torch Awards, Student Certification Series and Volunteer & Internship Program.

Together, we can give our next generation of business professionals the motivation they need to pursue promising careers.

Our organization recognizes the value and benefits these relationships bring to our student members, educators, and our organization.

By forging collaborative relationships with the many businesses and organizations across the country, Business Professionals of America is able to strengthen and grow the educational programs offered to the members that make up the heart of our organization.

Key partnerships have been developed with various businesses, government agencies, educational institutions and national organizations such as the U.S. Department of Labor, Conference Direct, Stukent, Association of International Certified Professional Accountants, Certiport, Precision Exams, HP, DELL and many others, all in an effort to bring more real-world opportunities forward for our members.

Each engagement opportunity helps motivate students toward real-world career paths whether government, public, private or nonprofit.

As an NLC Marketing Communications Intern, so many opportunities were opened to me, and I really got to see the work being put into the conference from all the professionals involved, whether it was BPA staff or other student interns and volunteers. My internship experience gave me a new perspective on the BPA National Leadership Conference, and a new respect for all the stakeholders from staff and alumni to board members, advisors, and volunteers who make the conference possible and amazing for every single student.”
